rough-looking man. What was his size? What gave him the ruffianly appearance you speak of? Was it his dress? A. He was not well-dressed as the rest of them. Q. Was he shabbily or dirtily dressed ? A. His clothes were more worn and shabby. Q. Was he a stout man? A. Yes, rather. Q. Which way did he go? A. He remained at the passage, while the other one started up the street. Q. The time was announced to these other men three times, was it? A. Yes. Q. Did he immediately go into the theater, after announcing the time the last occasion? A. Yes. Will you look at these prisoners, and see whether you recognize any of them as persons you saw on that occasion? A. If that man (pointing to Spangler) had a moustache, he has just the appearance exactly of the rough looking man standing at the end of the passage It was rather dark back there, and I could not see him distinctly; but he had a moustache. Q. You state that the last call of time was ten minutes after 10 o'clock; can you state when the other calls were made? A They were all made between half-past nine and ten minutes past ten o'clock Q. Do you think you recognize either of the other persons here as among the three you have mentioned? A. No; the third one was a very neat gentleman, well dressed, and with a moustache. Q. You do not see him here? A. No, he is better iressed than any one I see here. He wore one of those fashionable hats they wear in Washington-round top and stiff brim. Q. Can you describe his dress in color and appearance? A. No, not exactly. Q. How was he in regard to size? A. Not very large—about five feet six inches high. Q. And you have never seen that man before or since! A. No. Q. Do you remember now the color of his clothes? A. His coat was a kind of a drab color; his hat was black. Q. Did you observe these men, whether any had spurson? A. I did not observe that. Cross-examined by the Court and Mr. Ewing, but no new facts elicited.

JOHN M. BUCKINGHAM testified :- At night I was doorkeeper at Ford's Theater; during the day I was employed at the navy-yard; was acquainted with J. Wilkes Booth during that time. I saw him on the evening of the 14th of April, I judge about ten o'clock; he came into the theater, walked in and out again; he returned in about two or three minutes, came to me and asked what time it was; I told him to step into the lobby leading to the street and he could see; he stepped out and walked in at the door leading to the parquette, came out immediately, and walked up the stairway leading to the dress circle; that was the last I saw of him until I saw him leap on the stage, and run across the stage with a knife in his hand; he was uttering some sentence, but I could not hear what it was so far back. Am acquainted with the prisoner, Edward Spangler. Did not see him enter and go out at the front entrance during the play. My position was such that I would be likely to see any person who entered from the front of the theater. Every person has to pass me, entering the lower part of the theater for the parquette, the dress circle, and the orchestra. If this man Spangler had gone in from the street, I should have seen him. I am perfectly satisfied he did not pass in that way that night. Never saw him wear a moustache.

JAMES P. FERGUSON testified :- This evidence is in substance the same as that published in the Star at the time of the assassination, and refers to Booth's operations in and about the President's box and the leap upon the stage. Witness added: The next morning I got up, and Mr. Gifford said to me, it was a hell of a statement I had made last night about seeing the flash of the pistol in the box, when the pistol was fired outside of the door; and I told him it was fired inside the door, and afterwards went round to the theatre to examine the hole where the ball was supposed to have gone through the door; the hole was evidently bored with a large gimlet, and whittled with a knife; the scratches of the knife could plainly be seen. Mr. Gifford was the chief carpenter and had full charge there, as I always understood. Knew Spangler, did not see him that night; never saw him wear a moustache. Capt. THEODORE McGowan testified: knew Booth by sight, and saw him the night of the assassination. I was sitting in a chair in the aisle by the wall leading toward the door of the President's box, on the night of the murder, when a man came, who disturbed me in my seat, causing me to push my seat forward. to permit him to pass. He then stepped about three feet from where I was, and stood leisurely taking a survey of the house. I looked at him, because he happened to come almost in my line of sight. He took a small pack of visiting cards from his pocket, and, selecting one, replaced the others. He handed the card to the President's messenger, who was sitting just below. Whether the messenger took the card into the box, or, after locking, allowed him to go in. I do not know, but, in a moment or two. ments in the box and on the stage.]

saw him go into the box and close the door of the lobby leading to the box. [Here follows previous statements relative to Booth's move-Major HENRY R. RATHBONE, who was with the President, in the box, at the time of the assassination, testified, and read as evidence the statement written by him and published in the Star a day or two after the commission of the WILLIAM WITHERS, Jr., testified:—I belong to the orchestra of Ford's theatre, and saw Booth there the night of the assassination. I had some business on the stage with the stage manager, in regard to the national song I had composed. I wanted to see in what costume they were going to sing it. I learned from the manager that they would sing it in the costume they wore at the close of piece. After that, I was returning under the stage to the orchestra, when I heard the report of a pistol. I was astonished that a pistol should be fired while playing "The American Cousin." I never heard one before. Just then, I met a man running toward me. I stood completely paralyzed. I did not know what was the matter. He hit me on the leg, turned me around, and made two cuts at me, one on the neck and one on the side. As he went past me, I said, "that is Wilkes Booth." With that he made a rush for the door, and out he went. Just then, I heard the cry that the President was killed, and I saw him in the box, apparently dead. Am acquainted with the prisoner Spangler; have known him ever since I have been in the theatre. I do not recollect seeing him that night; I only happened to go on the stage to see the manager. Spangler's position ought to have been, when the scene was to be changed right in the centre of the stage. His business was to change the scenes, and he ought to have been right behind the scenes. Sometimes there are a great many persons there, so that you cannot pass, but that night everything seemed to be clear; I met nobody that night until I met Wilkes Booth. Q. When you met Booth on the stage as he was passing out, could you see the door as he went out? A. Yes, sir. Q. Was there any door. Reeper standing there that you could see? A. I did not see any. Q. Was the door open? A. No; I think not. Q. Was there anything to obstruct his passage out? A. No. Q. Was that not an unusual state of things ! A. It seemed strange to me; it was unusual. Q. Was there any check at all at the door as he went out A. No; it seemed to me, after he gave me the blow that knocked me down, and in which he came very near going under, he made one plunge and was out. Q. Was it your impression that the door was opened for him, or that he opened it himself? A. I don't know. I tried it myself, to see if it could be opened so easily; it surprised me. Q. Was it your impression that some one assisted him in going out by opening the door! A. I did not se anybody; I only saw him go out. Q. Do the scenes stand at this time just as they were left, or have they been changed? A. I really do not know. Q. Do you say there is no passage out of the theater except in front! A. No; you have to go from the alley round, and come in in front. JOE SIMMS (colored) testified :- Had worked at the theatre two years, was up at the fly where they hang up the curtains the night of the assassination. Saw Booth come in on the back part of the stage; he went out, and went into a restaurant beside the theatre. I saw him no more that night until after the performance commenced. During the performance, I heard a pistol fired, and looked immedistely to see what it was. I saw him jump from the private box on to the stage and make his escape across the stage, and I saw no more of him. Q Who was with him when he went out in the afternoon! A. There was no one; Mr. Spangler was standing out in front, and he invited him in to take a drink. Q. Is this the man here! (pointing to Spangler.) A. Yes; that is the man. Q. Did you hear anything said between them! A. No; they went in together to take a drink; that is all I heard. Q. Did you know Spangler very well! A. Yes. Q. Did you know Spangler very well? A. Yes. Q. Were he and Booth very intimate? A. They were quite intimate. Q. Had Spangler anything to do with Booth's corses? A. Nothing more than that he would have them attended to when Booth was away. Q. Was he hired by Booth? A. No, not Spangler—the other young man Booth hired, but I suppose Booth thought he would not do justice by his horse, and got Spangler to see to it when he was not there. Q. Did you see Spangler that night after five o'clock? A. Oh, yes; he was there on the stage, attending to his business as usual. Q. What time did you see him? A. It was in the What time did you see him? A. It was in the early part of the evening; I never inquired the time. I did not see him at all before the President was shot; I was looking at the perform.

ance until I heard the report of a pistol. Q. Did you see him during the play that night?

A. Yes; he was obliged to be there. Q. Did you see him in the first act? A. Yes. Q. Did yee see him in the second act? A. I do not remember seeing him in the second act. Q. Could member seeing him in the second act. Q. Could you have seen him where you were, up in the fly? A. Yes, sir; I could see him from my side over on the other side of the stage. Q. Was Spangler's place on the opposite side? A. Yes, sir; on the opposite side below. Q. Were you looking for him during the second act? A. No. Q. From where you were could you see the President's box? A. I could, plain. Q. What time in the first act did you see Spangler? A. In the first act I saw him walking about the stage looking at the performance. Q. Did you ever see him wear a moustache? A. No.

JOHN MILES (colored) testified:-Belonged to Ford's theater, and was there on the night of the assassination. Saw Booth; he came there about 9 or 10 o'clock. He brought a horse up from the stable down there to the back door, and called to Ned Spangler to come out from the thester threatings. the theater, three times. Then Spangler came across the stage to him. After that I did not see what became of Booth any more, till I heard the pistol go off. Then I went up in sight of the President's box. I heard some man say he believed somebody had shot the President. When I got there the President had gone out, or I could not see him. I went in a moment to the window, and heard the horse s feet going out of the alley. Q. You do not know what was said between them! A. No; I only heard him call for Ned Spangler. He kept his horse in a little stable close by there; I saw him come from there about three o'clock with Ned Spangler and James Maddox. The play was going on when Booth rode up and called for Spangler. They were just closing a scene and getting ready to take off that scene—Spangler was pushing the scene across the stage when Booth called to him three times. John Peanut held the horse. From the time Booth brought him until he went away, every time I saw him, John was holding the horse. There was no one there when Booth came up When I came down, after the President was shot, Spangler was outside of the same door Booth went out at. There were some more men out there; I did not notice who they were; there were not more than three or four when I came down. I asked Spangler who it was that held the horse. He told me not to say any. thing. I knew it was the same person who brought the horse that rode him away. He appeared to be very much excited; that was all that I noticed. At that time Booth had gone out of th eilley. JOHN SELECMAN testified -Am connected with Ford's Theater, and was present on the night of the assassination. Knew Booth, and saw him about nine o'clock. He came up on a horse to the back door of the theater. Spangler was standing there, and Booth said, "Help me all you can, won't you?" He replied, "Oh, yes!" I saw Booth that afternoon between four and five o'clock in a restaurant next door. He, with seven others, was there drinking. I saw Ned Spangler, Maddox, Booth, Peanuts, and a young gentleman by the name of Mol-den there. Maddox saked me if I would not take a drink. I said yes, and went up and took a glass of ale. Could not say whether Spangler was in liquor that night or not. Have seen him drunk at other times. There was nothing unusual in the arrangements of the furniture that night on the stage. The scenes and every-thing were in their proper places.

The Judge Advocate General remarked that to enable the Court to understand perfectly the testimony of witnesses relative to the occurrences in the theater, it would be proper for them to visit the theater and observe for themselves the different localities. The Court adjourned formally until ten o'clock this morning.

THE CONSPIRACY.

FORD'S THEATRE.

EXAMINATION BY THE COURT. APPEARANCE OF THE THEATRE. THE SCENERY UNTOUCHED.

THE PRESIDENT'S BOX. THAT MYSTERIOUS BAR. DUST AND DARKNESS.

At half-past nine o'clock this morning the members of the court, per agreement yester. terday, visited Ford's Theater for the purpose of examining the premises and the localities adjacent figuring in the evidence concerning the assassination.

Cempany C, (24th) Vet. Reserve Corps, (Maj. Steckner commanding) and which has been on guard duty at the theater since the night of the assassination, were found vigilant at their

While the members of the court were waiting in the lobby for the arrival of some of their associates, it was suggested by Assistant Judge Advocate Bingham that the passage in the building adjoining the theater to the south be opened as there was some confusion of statement in the testimony of witnesses as to the point whether there was any entrance to the theater at that side.

The keys were procured and the door opened, when it was found that this passage communicated with the stage and also with the third story of this adjoining building occupied by the brothers Ford as a sleeping apartment. The second story is an adjunct to the theater, communicating with the dress circle, and the room is known as the "Promenade Saloon" of Ford's, and is elegantly furnished, it will be remembered, with mirrors, carpets, marble tables, &c. The lower story is rented out as a restaurant, and between the restaurant and theater, as above stated, is this passage, which leads directly back to the stage, on a little lower level than the stage.

Returning from an inspection of this passage, the Court proceeded to the theater, passing in by the usual entrance, and thence to the stage. The stage is almost precisely in the condition it was at the moment of the assassination. The scene (third act, "American Cousin,") is set as at that moment, with the red-curtained recess in the center, used by "Asa Trenchard." The box used by Mr. Lincoln bears the same picture of Washington at its front, and a couple of flags are draped over the box as then, but not the Treasury Guards' flag, which caught Booth's spur on that occasion. The green barze stage-cloth has a foot-long rent at the point where Booth struck the stage; but whether made by him in his fall is not known.

A close inspection was made of the stage box and its surroundings, and especially the point where the bar was inserted between the wall and the door, whereby access to the box was prevented while Booth was doing his bloody

The curious fact, not before remarked, was elicited that the excavation (some three inches in length and one in depth) in the wall, intended to admit the bar, had been covered carefully, at some time previous to the assassination with a neatly fitting piece of wall paper. similar in color to that on the wall, and which had evidently been pasted over the excavation covering it to the sight. This accounts for the fact, not heretofore explained, that such a disfigurement on the wall attracted no attention. This piece of paper-apparently a squarish, oblong slip, judging from the paste-marks-is missing. Measuring the distance from the wall to the angle of the door, the brace must have been some four or five feet in length and prepared with some care to fit exactly. The box is in much the same condition as when the assassination took place, with the exception that the rocking chair used by Mr. Lincoln has been removed.

Returning to the stage via the dress circle, it was noticed that the guard on duty were quartered quite comfortably in the spacious promenade saloon. The seats in the theatre were covered by a heavy coat of dust, adding something to the general feeling of unpleas. antness about the sombre, dimly lit interior of any theatre by day; and which was a thousand times heightened on this occasion by the awful asseciations now so indissolubly linked with this building.

A close inspection was next made of the rear exit and its approaches, by which Booth escaped. Two doors were found in the rear, one of large size, perhaps fifteen feet by twenty, hung at the top by hinges, and used only for the passing in and out of large articles, stage machinery, &c., &c. This door, which is in the centre of the stage rear, was not open on the night of the assassination. The second door, and the one used by Booth, is at the northeast corner of the stage. It is a small door, not much higher than a tall man's head. and has a sash and wooden shutter, the sash, however, being unglazed. This door is immediately in the rear of the passage between the slips and the wall on the north side of the stage, and it was quite perceptible that the scenes had been carefully set previous to the assassination by some accomplice of Booth, so as to afford much more than the usual facility of egress. Emerging to the paved alley, over the rough pebbles of which Booth spurred his horse on the fatal night, a large rough carpenters' bench strikes the eye prominently and is presently pointed out as the bench on which Pea-nut John lay and drowsed while holding Booth's horse. A half dozen soldiers were now seated upon it, occupying their time with carving ingenious teys from wood as relies of the place. Further down the ailey to the right is a sert of tumbledown shanty, used by Booth to stable his

Immediately adjacent to the door through which Booth passed to the alley are a flight of steps descending to the room under the stage North of the stage and on the same level with the stage is the Green Room, and the room reserved for theatrical stars, the latter room being now occupied by the military guard as an office. Behind the slides at the scene shifters stand was hanging a slip of paper, uppermost of a series of similar slips, what appeared to be stage directions for setting the scenes of a play named curiously enough, "THE REBEL CHIEFTAIN."

The Court having made a minute investigation of the premises, serving to give a clear idea of all the different bearings of the case, so far as this locality was concerned, proceeded in ambulances, under escort of a detachment of the 6th West Virginia cavalry, to the Commission Rooms, Penitentiary Building.

GREAT CONSPIRACY. THE TRIAL.

Proceedings To-day.

THE PRISONERS.

NEW EVIDENCE. THE DESIGN UPON GRANT.

About ten o'clock the prisoners were brought in, and escorted to their seats in the box, a sergeant or corporal of the Veteran Reserve Corps being seated next to each, as heretofore. Mrs. Surratt is placed this morning in company with her fellow-prisoners, the line of raised seats having been extended for that purpose. Thus the eight prisoners are now on the platform. During the reading of the record, Mrs. Surratt sat with her hands and forearms resting on the railing, on which she bowed her face, seldom raising her head, and then to hold her forehead on her hand, with elbow on the rail. She now appears much downcast, her features showing unmistakable signs of mental wear and tear. Herold, the next on the platform, separated from Mrs Surratt by the gateway to the door, leading to the cells, looks quite as dirty and uncombed as on yesterday. Payne sits fiercely erect as on yesterday, his eyes wandering around the room. He appar ently pays little attention to the proceedings. Atzerodt, who sits next, leans forward with the iron stecks on his wrists resting on his knees, and from the motion of his mouth it would appear that he is taking comfort from an ample quid of tobacco. O'Laughlin, haggard and pale, and with widely spreading black hair, occasionally buries his face in his hands. He too affords himself the solace of "short-cut." The heavy purple-hued face of Spangler affords no clue to his thoughts if he thinks at all.

Dr. Mudd is clothed in a black suit, with a clean white shirt, and apparently pays more attention to the trial than any of his fellow prisoners-his eyes mostly resting on the person speaking. He appears more restless than heretofore, and with some hectic on his cheeks Arnold, who is seated next to the window, and who has rather an intelligent pleasant face, gives many a wistful glance at the sunny landscape. At 10% o'clock the Court was called to order by Major General Hunter, President, all the members present. The President said that it had been suggested by a member that the reading of the record of the previous day's proceedings be dispensed with, inasmuch as the evidence had been fully published and the counsel were furnished with the official record.

Mr. Ewing stated that he would have no objestion, provided that the counsel were to have the privilege of recalling witness when they discovered an error in the evidence; and he suggested inasmuch as the official record was Government retain the witnesses until the second day after they gave their testimony. that the counsel may have an opportunity to examine their evidence and recall them, should any errors be discovered.

Judge Advocate Holt objected to this proceedure, stating that there was no precedent for it, and in a case where so many lives were involved, it would lead to censure were it adopted in this instance.

The President directed that the reading of the evidence should be proceeded with, which was done by Messrs. D. F. Murphy and Ben.

Upon the reading of the testimony of David Stanton, he asked to correct it, to the effect that on reflection he remembers that when witness met O'Laughlin in the house of Secretary Stanton, and asked him why he was there, he said he was a lawyer himself, and knew Mr. Stanton very well. O'Laughlin pointed to General Grant and asked who that gentleman was.

At twenty minutes past one o'clock, the Court took a recess until two p. m.

At two o'clock the prisoners were again brought in, and the Commission assembled, when the reading of the record of yesterday's proceedings was concluded at half-past two The first witness sworn was John Pranuts.

Witness saw Booth on the afternoon on which the assassination took place, who drove his horse to the stable between 4 and 5 o'clock. when he asked him (witness) for a halter. Witness did not see Booth when he came with his horse between 9 and 10 o'clock. Spangler called witness to hold Booth's horse, telling him it there was anything wrong about his leaving his post to do so to blame it on him. Witness was attending the stage door at the time. Witness was sitting on a bench when he heard the report of the pistol. When Booth came out he told witness to give him his horse and knocked him down, striking him with the butt of the knife. Witness was with Harry Ford when the box was fitted up Spangler was present, having been sent for to remove the partition. Spangler, in the box. d-d the President and Gen. Grant. Witness did not hear anything said about what might be done to the President. (Objected to by Mr. Ewing.)

By Mr. Ewing: - Witness heard Bebney call Spangler, saying that Booth wanted him Spangler.) Witness did not see Booth or Spangler in front of the theatre. Spangler was in the habit of hitching up Booth's horse, and when Booth was there in the afternoon Spangler wanted to take the saddle off, but Booth would not let him. Witness thinks that it was the first scene of the third act which was being played when witness went out to hold the horse. When the scene would stand out a whole act those who shifted the scenes would frequently go to one side.

By the Court :- Booth, when he made his exit from the theater, did so by the small doer. It was about three o'clock when they were fixing up the box, when witness, Spangler and Jake (who was a stage carpenter at one time) were there. Witness never saw anything of a bar across the door. The key to the box (occupied by the President) always remained in the office during the day. There are locks on the doors on the inner sides of the private boxes Witness went for flags for the box, but at that time Spangler and Jake came

By Mr. Ewing:-Witness did not see any red cushioned chairs in the box when he left the box. When he returned to the theater witness and Spangier went to the theater. Wit. ness did not know John H. Surratt, but may have seen him.

MARY L. TURNER, sworn .- Witness resides in the rear of the theater, and knew Booth by sight. Witness saw Booth leading a horse to the back door of the theater. He called Ned three times, and when Spangler came out he said tell Maddox to step here. Maddox came and Booth said something to him in a low tone. Witness identified Spangler in the box, and stated that she asked him if he did not know that Booth called him, and Spangler said he had not

MARY J. ANDERSON (colored) sworn .- Witness saw Booth near the stable in the morning and then near the same place between 2 and 3 o'clock, when a lady was with him, and they appeared to talk about the alley. At night a carriage drove down the alley, and then a horse was led up the alley; the man pushed the door open, said something in a low tone, and called "Ned" four times; Maddox came, and between him and Ned they held him; they all went into the theater except the man who had the horse, who after sitting on a work bench, walked the horse up and down. She saw the door open, and about ten minutes after saw a man come out with something glittering in his hand, and

By Mr. Ewing :- Witness knows Mr. Maddox. He has a reddish skin and light hair, and is about 25 or 26 years of age. Maddox, when he held the barse, moved it out of the sight of witness. Spangler came to the door, when Booth told him to send Maddox, and witness thinks that Spangler came out of the door again. Witness did not think that it was over one hour that the horse was in the rear of the theater before Booth made his exit. Witness knows that there were three men connected with the horse, but could not say that Spangler was one or not. The man who had hold of the herse had on a light coat.

WM. BROWNING, (Private Secretary to the President,) sworn.—Between the hours of four and five witness left the Vice President's room, at the Capitol, on the day of the assassination, and on arriving at the Kirkwood House, he went to the office and found in his box a card, on which was written-

"Don't wish to disturb you. Are you at J. WILKES BOOTH." Witness was acquainted with Booth, whom he met at Nashville several times while he was playing there. It was a common mistake to put cards for the Vice President in witness' box, and vice versa, as their boxes were adjoining. As he had known Booth heattached no importance to the fact of his leaving the card, and he made the remark to the clerk, "Oh, this is from Booth. Is he playing here?" and he intended calling on Booth. But after the assassination he thought differently of the matter of Booth's leaving the card.

By Major Doster:-The Vice President dined about five o'clock, and witness thinks that he was in his room the remainder of the evening. Witness saw Mr. Johnson in his room between 6 and 7 that evening, and again about 11after the assassination.

MAJOR KILBURN KNOX sworn:-Witness was at the house of Secretary Stanton about half past ten on the night of the illumination, April 13. Gen. Grant, Mrs. Grant, Secretary Stanton and others were on the steps. A band was there playing; Secretary Stanton was talking to Mrs. Grant. At that time some fireworks were set off, and witness stepped down from the steps to afford the children an opportunity to see, and a man came up to him and said "Is Stanton in!" Witness answered "Who you mean, Secretary Stanton?" This man (who was identified by witness as the prisoner O'Laughlin) said "Yes," and added something about being a lawyer, himself in town. Witness thought he was under the influence of liquor. O'Laughlin went to the other side of the steps and finally came back and passed up into the hall. Witness went to David Stanton and asked him if he knew that man (O'Laughlin.) He answered that he did not. Witness thea said that the man was under the influence of liquor and ought not to be permitted to stay. Mr. David Stanton then spoke to O'Laughlin, and he went away. It is the impression of witness that at this time Gen. Grant was in the parlor.

Secretary Stanton stood on the steps, and this man in entering the hall, passed by the Secretary. Before entering he stood behind the steps, on the side next to the library, from which position he could look into the parlo and see who was there. The parlor was bril hantly illuminated at the time.

By Mr. Cox:-There was a crowd around the steps. O'Laughlin was dressed in a black slouch hat, black coat and nants. Witness saw this man (O'Laughlin) one week ago last Sunday in prison. Witness is on duty at the War Department, and after closing went up to the Secretary's house. JOHN HATTER sworn:-Witness identified the prisoner, (O'Laughlin,) who he saw on the night of the illumination. 13th of April, at Secretary Stanton's house. Witness was standing on the steps, when O'Laughlin came up and asked if Gen. Grant was in and said he wished to see him. Witness told him that that was not a proper time to see Gen. Grant. Witness was on the top step and O'Laughlin was two steps below. O'Laughlin walked off towards the tree-box and seemed to stop for reflection, but afterwards witness missed sight
